Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 02 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Warm sunny spells developing in many areas today.

Today:
After a fairly cloudy start, most areas will have a dry day with warm sunny spells developing. Best of the sunshine in the south and west but parts of the far north and east may stay mostly cloudy all day.

Tonight:
After a fine end to the day for many, areas of cloud will return to large parts of the UK overnight. Clearer in the west where fog patches are possible.

Friday:
After another fairly cloudy start, warm sunny spells will develop in many regions. Parts of eastern and northeastern UK will, however, tend to stay cool and cloudy.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Continuing largely dry, before likely turning less settled from the west later on Sunday with showers. Becoming breezier but also warmer.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.